

Druidry vs. Wicca

For more information about Druidry:

Visit:

www.ravenwoodgrove.org

or

www.adf.org

Email:

info@ravenwoodgrove.org

For more information about Wicca:

Visit:

www.wicca.org

or

www.witchvox.com

A Balanced Comparison

By Bardd Dafydd

Vice Archdruid, ADF

Druidry and Wicca

How are they similar?

How are they different?

Druidry (as practiced by Ar nDraiocht Fein (ADF))	Wicca (in general, specific groups will vary greatly)
We want our Druid Grove to be large and inclusive. The public is invited to most Rituals and events.	Some groups are open to the public, but most Wiccan Covens are smaller and private. You usually need an invitation to attend.
Most Druid Groves worship a variety of Gods and Goddesses and don't try to tie them together. Most Groves also base their focus on one or more cultural pantheons primarily in the Indo-European traditions or to a lesser extent Norse traditions.	Wiccans often concentrate their worship on the Lord and Lady and sometimes say, "All Gods are aspects of the one God, all Goddesses are aspects of the one Goddess".
Druid circles are open and the magic comes from the center.	Wiccans close their circles and use the perimeter as a magical barrier.
Although Druids believe in Magic, Druidic Ritual is more about strengthening our relationship with the Gods, Ancestors and Spirits of Nature. Magical workings are of secondary importance.	Most Wiccans seem to concentrate on Magical Spells and workings more than Druids do.